Neighborhood Advice

Freely Given by a Norway Citizen.

When one has suffered tortures from a bad back and found relief from the aches and pains, that person's advice is of untold value to friends and neighbors. The following neighborhood advice comes from a Norway resident.

M. W. Sampson, Prop. boat transportation business, 19 Bridge St., Norway, says: "A cold settled on my kidneys and brought on attacks of backache. I was lame and unable to move any way, the pain in my back was so severe. My kidneys didn't act right and I had dizzy spells. A friend who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results, advised me to try them, so I went to Stone's Drug Store and got three boxes. After I had finished taking them, the trouble left and I have been free from kidney disorder since."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Sampson had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

OTISFIELD

Mrs. Hattie M. Davis

Mrs. Hattie May, wife of Edwin Davis of Spurr's Corner, Otisfield, passed away at St. Barnabas Hospital, Portland, Thursday, Nov. 1, of acute Bright's disease. Her infant baby died the night before, age three days. Mrs. Davis had been in poor health for a long time, but the end came very suddenly. Everything possible was done for her comfort, and she had the best of loving and skilled care, both at home and at the hospital. Her husband and daughter Marjorie were at the hospital constantly until she went away. Her many friends and loved ones will miss her face at the ice cream parlor which she has carried on for several years. She always had a smile for them all.

Mrs. Davis was born in Otisfield, April 30, 1883, the daughter of Wyatt T. and Abbie Durpee Edwards. Mr. Edwards passed beyond nearly two years ago and Mrs. Edwards has lived with her daughter several years.

Mrs. Davis married Edwin Davis sixteen years ago. Twin daughters were born to them, Marion Elinor and Marjorie May, Marion Elinor died at between two and three years of age. It seems particularly hard for Mrs. Edwards as Hattie was all the daughter she had, Elinor her oldest daughter died several years ago, leaving a son, Ellsworth Stuart who has always lived with his grandparents.

Funeral services were held at the home Sunday, at one o'clock conducted by Rev. Chester G. Miller of South Paris, who spoke words of comfort to the many relatives and friends who filled the house to overflowing. Russell Baker, a great friend of Mrs. Davis, sang her favorite song, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

The many lovely flowers were tokens of the love of her friends and relatives. A pall was used.

She was laid to rest in Cedar Crest Cemetery.

The smile on her face is quiet.

And a flower is on her breast.

Her baby lies there beside her.

And the word on her lips is "Rest."

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."

Mrs. M. CHASE, 3640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

Why Leakage is Common

Electrical leakage, for several reasons, is a common fault of the ordinary radio B battery. One of these reasons is that as voltage is increased, the tendency towards leakage is also increased, and the voltage of the B batteries is comparatively high—24 volts for a B battery as contrasted with 6 volts for the A battery.

Another reason is that in the ordinary B battery used in radio service, the tendency toward leakage has not been sufficiently taken into account.

Most ordinary radio batteries, are merely adaptations of automobile batteries, and in automobile service battery leakage does not have to be guarded against so carefully as in radio operation. In the first place, the tendency of the automobile battery to leak is much less because it is usually only of 6-volt construction, while, in the second such leakage as does take place, has no perceptible influence upon results.

"I don't know as much about C. M. P. Co. as a Maine man ought to know"

A Maine man, who was interested in our security, came into the office and when asked, "What do you know about Central Maine Power Company," said:

"I don't know as much about Central Maine Power Company as a Maine man ought to know."

A home power company is a vital factor in its state's growth. Directly or indirectly it affects practically every citizen of the state.

Central Maine Power Company is such a company. It serves over 148 communities in which are located over 254,000 people. It serves directly over 56,000 of these people, including over 500 industries. To take care of this vast service over 975 Maine men and women are employed at a total cost of over $1,625,000 a year.

A stable home power company is bound to grow. It furnishes an article that few people will willingly do without—in good times or bad—in war or peace.

Already nearly 11,000 partner-owners are associated in this Company—not a one of whom has missed a dividend for 18 years. If you, too, wish to invest in a company that has as its interests the upbuilding of Maine—that should, we feel sure, pay dividends ALWAYS, invest in the 7 per cent. Preferred Stock of Central Maine Power Company.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Tonic, so called Blood Purifier, and acts through the blood upon the mucous surfaces of the body, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

COMPENSATION

Sometimes when we think those near and dear to us have been neglectful to give us much pleasure when they were situated to do so without any trouble, we have been inclined to complain and find fault, but when we stopped to think of the Divine Law of Compensation in some other direction, we have been comforted immediately.

How blessed it is that our never erring, May shower has instituted such a law and the very neglects and slights have resulted for our highest prosperity and good. If people could only realize this fully, how many heartaches and useless worry would be eliminated from our consciousness, knowing the law of God never varies, is constantly in action and for our best good, if we will but live for it.

I have a very kind friend who is always trying to do something for others in the most beautiful spirit of love and helpfulness. I think such a spirit is very acceptable to our Heavenly Father and covers a multitude of faults in some other direction perhaps. I think the only real happiness consists in trying to make others happy. So, as some of our greatest thinkers term it, "Let brotherly love be on the increase" and all discordant feelings vanish into nothingness, their native element.

Realty Ownership Thrift.

We find fewer spendthrifts among the owners of real estate. They know that the mere filing of a judgment in the county clerk's office becomes a lien on their real property—not as if they could, conceal their assets in some out-of-town bank and when they found their debts accumulating silently steal away. Hence, it is to the real-estate owners that the store-keeper looks for his best customers, and since, after all, the entire fiscal powers of the government are nourished by trade, it can readily be seen that home ownership encourages trade and stabilizes credits.—Exchange.

WITS AND HABITS OF THE ANGLEWORM

The angleworm has neither eyes nor ears, but in spite of these drawbacks, the humble creature is wise in its way. It knows enough to find food and shelter, both in winter and summer.

I have often wondered where the earthworms go in winter. Naturally one would think they go deep into the ground below the frost line, but for most angleworms it would be impossible to go down so deep. In our northern states the soil often freezes to a depth of four or five feet, which means several feet into hard clay or other subsoil, in which the worms cannot burrow.

Last fall, on November 7th, I dug up some flower-beds, and found many earthworms, in the black surface soil. On another occasion I dug late in fall, for bulbs and roots in a clump of dead wild sunflowers. Here also I found many angleworms, which had dug up into the surface as they do in dry weather, for the autumn had been dry. These worms, it seemed quite clear, would allow themselves to freeze in winter and would come to life again in spring. And I think that in this way most earthworms survive the winter. But if a worm freezes of the ground, it is really killed.

Every fisherman has had difficulty to find angleworms in a spell of dry weather in mid-summer. Dig as he might in the sweat of his brow, the worms had left all their old haunts. In reality the worms are feeling the surface. They are still in their old haunts, but they have made themselves invisible in a case of earth, a sort of talisman, as the poets call it. In this case they are neatly coiled up, awaiting the call of the clouds. But they have also gone deeper, eighteen inches below the surface, and unless one is aware of this, and knows the trick of the talisman, he may delve and dig an hour and not find a worm.

Strange as it may sound there are no angleworms in the wilderness. I have looked for them in every wild place, where I have pitched my tent, in Minnesota, Wisconsin, on Isle Royale, on Lake of the Woods, in the canyons of the Bad Lands of South Dakota, but never did I find an angleworm.

Old trappers and woodsmen to whom I have talked and tell the same story. "There are no angleworms in the wilderness," they all claim, "unless somebody planted them, or brought them in by accident." I have often wondered if Darwin was aware of this fact, when he wrote his great work on the earthworm. I am not quite prepared to make the sweeping assertion that there were originally no native earthworms in the whole North American wilderness, but in the parts where I have camped they are so scarce, if there are any at all, that the fishermen cannot find them. The only place where I ever saw what seemed to be a small earthworm was in an old beaver dam in the Itasca Forest, but this was near a place where white men had logged and camped.

There are trout streams in the North Woods, along whose banks angleworms may be found, but these are streams that have been fished by man for many years, and the worms have been in tentatively or accidentally planted.

The earthworm is one of nature's rainy day children, which means that it will travel and move about only in wet weather. It is not a creature which cannot cross dry or dusty roads or paths.

Their favorite time to crawl about, obeying the instinct of spreading over the earth, is on a rainy night in spring and summer. After such a night, their trails may be found on every bare patch of fine sand and mud near streams and gardens. How the slender, threadlike trails cross and recross! I do not think that the worms travel in any special direction, they just wander hither and thither, and in this way a small colony of them would soon spread over suitable ground in every direction.

At the approach of daylight, they go back to earth, except those that were lost and bewildered on paved walks and roads, and there are thousands and thousands of these after every spring and summer rain. The myriad of angleworms, which one finds in such places, become lost and crawled themselves tired, and when the sun comes out, they die and shrivel up.

I have never seen robins and other early birds pick up any of these belated worms, but the birds have undoubtedly eaten their fill before I get up, and they could not possibly eat them all.

While the warm rain of spring, after the black soil has thawed, will bring the worms out by the million, the great earthworm army does not respond to a late cold rain in autumn.

On the night of November 8 last year, a cold rain, mixed with a little snow fall. The following morning I did find a few earthworms stranded on the sidewalks, but there was scarcely one where I usually find a hundred in spring and summer. These venturesome worms that did not get back into the earth, were killed by the frost, for during the day the weather had turned cold and the ground began to freeze.

A few earthworms will move about in the day time. On one occasion I was rained out all day in my tent on the bank of the Minnesota River. When I was tired of reading and watching the rain, I put on my rubber coat and walked along the bank to look for rainy-day children, such as frogs, snails, slugs and salamanders. On that walk I found several very large earthworms crawling leisurely about amongst the dead sticks and leaves. They had originally come from a nearby cultivated field, for the Minnesota River no longer runs through a wild country.

What does an earthworm know? It knows how to find its food, and take care of itself under adverse conditions. Against the new danger of cement walks, paved streets, and oiled roads it is almost helpless.

Its natural enemies are birds and burrowing animals like moles. It seldom shows itself to birds, and the robins probably locate it partly by sound.

Against the earth it is no refuge, and the worms know it. If a "worm" makes a noise like a mole, the angleworm will hurriedly come out of the ground as fast as it is capable to hurry.

A lady friend of mine probes her flower pots of earthworms by feeling in the earth with a knitting needle. This simple device makes them come out, and they can be picked up without difficulty. At one time I was pumping up my bicycle, when to my surprise a fat angleworm came hurrying twisting out of the ground.

enemy, the worm, guided by instinct, flees to the surface.

These are the things the worms must know or there would be no worms, as John Burroughs would have put the case. They know other things. Although they have no eyes, they know the difference between day and night. And they are remarkably quick to withdraw into their holes, and have the ability to resist being pulled out.

A PATIENT JEHOVAH

A very long time ago, suppose we call it four hundred million years, the dusts of interminable space rushed together to form the seething mass we call the sun. Not so long ago and yet quite remote from our own day, let us say eighty million years, the speck we call the earth was thrown off from the sun's blazing surface to take up its eternal journey around the parent body. Ages pass and a time comes when the mists drift apart and the first sunlight peeps in upon tides which ebb and flow over hot sands and against slow cooling rocks. Still other days, roll away and in that and, yet another day, the primordial fires, elements previously inert, group themselves to form or make a home for that wonderful thing called life. Futile it is up to the moment to speak of time, for how can we think of duration with nothing animate to experience it?

Groping back to it through numberless, intensely interesting eras of development we find the origin. Can we get an inspiration from the thought that the material universe, including the bodies of which we have so brief a tenancy, was once a part of the sun itself. Can we gain a confidence as to life hereafter from the obvious fact that the mind, that curious entity, independent of and dominant over both time and space, could not have sprung from such a source. Do we realize that all this stupendous history was necessary to our coming? Do we understand the obligation resting upon beings such as we, developed by all nature at such a cost in years and energy? Do we then feel duty in the face of the fact that studious things through ages have been done to create us and the wonderful world built for our comfort and happiness?

Now I am not unmindful of the perfectly magnificent things which have been accomplished by the people of my race. Be it understood when I speak of "my race" I mean not Americans (whatever that may signify) but all mankind. The progress you can trace in recorded history is not less than a marvel. But what of it? As sensible beings we want to view this great advance not in contrast with its starting point at zero but with its possibilities. The question is not have we done wonderful things but has man lived up to his opportunities? And have we? We are in a world fitted to be inhabited only by peaceable, happy people. Did we do as well as we knew they need be not one case of want or a single unhappy person in all the lands lit by the sun. When possibilities are considered we may say that not one atom of human knowledge should be devoted to anything but humane and beneficent purposes. Are these ideals too high? Utterly, when put forth as possibilities in the mess we have made of civilization; not at all too high when thought of as a condition of which this world is capable.

Often I think (with not the slightest irreverence) of Jehovah as a very patient individual. He brings into being the earth of ours to be governed by laws and otherwise conditioned as an ideal home for the humanity he can force will come to people it. And then he finds us here in the year of our Lord 1923, spending the moments of our emergency in war and destruction and a very seagrate fraction of it for those things which aim to carry out his ultimate purpose. Were I Deity (and again I am speaking with the most sincere reverence) I should feel like scrapping the whole thing and perhaps, if not too much of a disheartened, trying the experiment anew.—R. T. Patten, Independent Reporter.

Americanism and the Ku Klux Klan

At least 800 men and women heard Rev. Dr. W. H. Lannin of Boston lecture on "Americanism and the Ku Klux Klan" at Association Hall, Wednesday evening. F. Eugene Farnsworth who was advertised to speak, had been called to New York and Dr. Lannin, a convincing lecturer working in Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, substituted.

The speakers explained that the Klan is not a gang of thugs as portrayed in the daily press, but a strong body of brainy Protestants, one hundred per cent American and true to the ideals incorporated into the constitution by our forebears.

Not all Protestants may become Klansmen," said the speaker. Boozed loggers, cheap ward heeler, grasping politicians and other undesirables will never receive the right hand of fellowship in a Klan ceremonial. Honest, patriotism, a clean heart and pure mind are absolutely necessary.

This speaker stated the Klan was not a political machine and not striving to form a political party. They believed in free speech, but not in the sense of unbridled radicalism and blasphemy. They also believed in using the ballot to clean up the riot of corruption now surging over America.

According to the speaker, 6,500,000 Klansmen are enrolled and joining at the rate of 20,000 each week. He predicted a membership of 12,000,000 within a few months and the end will not have been reached.

THE DUMP TRANSFORMED

What would you say at making a tour of a certain old public dumping ground in late September? You'd fairly shiver with disgust at the suggestion, and think I was degenerating fast, but, after fifteen minutes you didn't think differently of the place I'd be very disappointed in you and think there was trouble with what was under your hat.

The "Dump No Rubbish" sign has been on display for two years or more, and it is surprising how soon Nature covers up man's thoughtlessness.

The first thing you'll notice is the beautiful fall asters, some higher than your head, just a purplish blue haze of beauty with several white or pale yellow butterflies clinging to the yellow centers.

The asters are growing all the way from this height to a couple of feet high; these lower ones have such immense sized flowers and are more lavender colored. They look like regular bushes wrapped around with Enchantment.

Now don't say it makes you sad to see the "frost flowers" because they tell you that winter is coming. Didn't you know it was? But what are they telling the swarms of butterflies who fly gaily away at your approach but come sailing back and attend to their own affairs. Do you think they would be so happy and carefree if the story they got was dismal? Just look at that gorgeous monarch flutter away and come around you and settle back where he was. Isn't he happy to have this glorious chance to enjoy such beauty and sweetness? Whatever happens before morning he is enjoying what is given him now.

You hear something rustle and you take your eyes from the butterflies to find a dear little Song Sparrow running around looking at you, trying to decide what you are doing, tramping around here in the seclusion. Can't you remember how you stopped to listen to his sweet song last spring, and finally saw him perched on the highest stick of the brush pile, singing enough to burst himself? He is quiet now, but busy and happy.

The next thing you know you are looking with big eyes at a luxuriant plant with pink spikes of blossoms all over it. Now, did you ever see anything like that before? Just look at it, get this poison idea back to the dark ages where it came from, very few things are poison to touch. This is just the pink knotweed you see in weedy gardens, and is about a foot high there; here it is a big bush waving its jewels in your very faces. You may pick some blossoms to puzzle your friends who won't believe they grew on the dump.

You really begin to look around now and you see a small elm all dressed up for a party; a woodbine seed has found footing in the ground or somewhere grown all summer unnoticed, but now the light frost has touched its leaves and they are a beautiful red, very conspicuously entwined over the trees, bushes and unsightly tin cans.

Awfully sorry but our noon hour is over and we must get back to work, but how different everything looks after spending a few minutes with the butterflies and asters. You will want to re-visit this place next, May and June. It will be just as lovely with a wholly different aspect, all tender green and delicate flowers to welcome the returning birds. Any time of year you'll find treasures here worth your time to look up.

When Winter Comes

The skin is easily harmed by cold weather and wintry winds. The hands and face should be protected against roughness and chaps by the use of a good lotion or cream.

For this purpose we particularly recommend such well-known products as CARA NOME VANISHING CREAM, LEMON COCOA BUTTER LOTION, REXALL CREAM OF ALMONDS, RIKER'S ILASOL and JUNEVE VANISHING CREAM.

Keep your skin soft and white by using these guaranteed preparations. Any one of them will also serve admirably as a face powder base.

THE FOXY MAIL ORDER MAN

Do you know that Sears, Roebuck & Company have a bureau whose duty it is to read each week the country newspapers from all over the country? When the folks in the bureau find a town where the merchants are not advertising in the local papers, they immediately flood that territory with literature.

Herman Rosenfield, the advertising manager, says such advertising always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants use their local papers.

A New Stove

Fall is a good time to change stoves. You get the benefit of having a new, tight, efficient stove. The saving in fuel alone, during the winter months, the time when a stove is used the most, goes a long way toward buying a new stove. A new stove in the fall gives one the satisfaction of knowing that there is no danger of its giving out during the winter necessitating waiting for repairs or a new one.

Clarion Stoves are noted for their good looks, being easy to keep clean, large dampers which are easy to operate, large castings made of new iron which radiate the heat evenly and last indefinitely.

A very usual comment made by people looking at stoves is, "I've always heard that the Clarion is a good stove."

We have Clarions in all the sizes and styles that are commonly used and repairs for them in stock. Come in and let us show them to you.

House Burned

Ernest Grover of East Waterford visited his mother, Mrs. Ezra Lebroke Saturday, Oct. 27. The house in which Mr. and Mrs. Grover were living was burned week before last. Mr. Grover is night watchman and Mrs. Grover stayed at the corn shop with him during the night. They had been away that day and on returning at night went directly to the shop instead of stopping at the house. They got their supper there and consequently there had been no fire in the house since morning. Mr. Grover was out of doors as usual about 2 o'clock while on his rounds as night watchman and all was safe, but when he went out at 4 o'clock he saw the glare of the fire and the house was all falling in and everything in the house was burned. The cause of the fire is a mystery. Fortunately it was raining heavily and a disastrous fire was prevented.

Back of the house was a thick growth of trees and bushes and with a large quantity of dry leaves it would have been almost impossible to have stopped the flames from starting a dangerous forest fire.

DOCTOR IN DOVER COMMENDS "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

This Wonderful Fruit Medicine Relieved Torturing Eczema

Dover, New Hampshire.
"In 1908, I began to be troubled with Eczema. It started on my face and gradually spread. The second summer, I was so badly afflicted I had to lay off work. I would keep my hands tied up at night to prevent digging into my flesh while asleep. I spent hundreds of dollars in seeking relief. I would go for several months without trouble and then the Eczema would break out again and I would be in for a siege of suffering."

My hands, especially across the knuckles, would be so puffed and swollen I could not do any obstetrical work or operations. It was about three months ago I chanced to read an advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives" about a person being relieved of Weeping Eczema by using this remedy and "Sootha Salva". I bought both and in about a week, noticed an improvement. I have now used two boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" and one of "Sootha Salva" and am entirely free of Eczema.

My flesh is clear and smooth and I am that gratified with the results that I cannot proclaim too loudly the merits of these remedies."

E. N. OLZENDAM, D.V.M.

"Fruit-a-tives" act so excellently on Eczema because these wonderful tablets, made from fruit juices and tonics, first of all, rid the system of impurities. "Fruit-a-tives" regulate the bowels, correcting the Constipation which is usually present in Eczema. When the bowels, liver, stomach and skin are all regular and in healthy condition, the blood is pure and there are no impurities to be deposited on the skin, causing Eczema, Pimples and other Skin Blemishes.

If you have any skin trouble, such as Eczema, try "Fruit-a-tives"—50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At dealers or sent by

RADIO RECEIVING SETS

By Harry F. Dart, E. E.
Compiler of the Radio Operator's Course for the International Correspondence Schools
Article 2. Three-Circuit Regenerative Receiver

A three-circuit regenerative receiver has, as the name implies, three tuning circuits. This type of set, while somewhat harder to tune than a single-circuit regenerative receiver, has means for making it very selective. Even with a fairly long antenna this feature is very effective in eliminating undesired stations under reasonable conditions.

A typical three-circuit regenerative receiver is shown in the accompanying figure. The antenna, a and ground b are connected to a coil c which is used to tune the antenna circuit to approximately the wave-length of the desired signals. This coil is commonly arranged with taps to connect in the desired number of turns and is called the primary. Sometimes a variable condenser is used in fine tuning of this circuit if placed in series in the antenna or ground lead.

Another coil d is mounted either inside, or, as is more preferable, close to one end of coil c so as to pick up some of the energy of the primary. Coil d, called the secondary, is mounted on a rotor so that by a turning movement it is possible to vary the amount of energy picked up by the secondary coil d. In this manner the signal strength may be made as great or small as desired within reasonable limits.

The secondary coil d has a fixed number of turns. The grid circuit may be accurately tuned to the desired incoming signal by two general methods. One is by the use of a variometer e, and the other is by means of a condenser f. If either one is used the other need not be, although both may be employed. It will be found that any change produced by one may be largely compensated for by the other device. If the variometer e only is used (with condenser f and its lead wires removed from the circuit), all of the grid circuit tuning is done by the variometer e which should have a sufficient inductance, its main property, range to cover the desired wave-length range. If it does not work satisfactorily in this respect it may help to put a 50-turn coil in series with the variometer, or to use a small fixed condenser where the variable condenser f is shown. In either case the variometer would still be the main tuning device for the grid circuit. The tuning of the secondary, or grid, circuit also may be accomplished by a variable condenser f with the variometer e removed from the circuit. This condenser should not be too small else it will not have a great enough capacity range to cover the desired wave-length range, neither should it be too large. For accurate work it is necessary to have a vernier adjustment on this condenser, or a separate small-capacity variable condenser may be used in parallel with the main tuning condenser.

The grid condenser g and its high-resistance grid leak h are the same units as are usual in regenerative sets. The three-element electron tube l with its suitable battery i, and rheostat j, is any one of the standard types now available. It should be noted that the grid return goes to the positive terminal of the A battery at i, when the detector tube is one of the high-vacuum or hard type. With a soft or gassy tube the grid return should connect with the negative end, or terminal, of the A battery.

The plate condenser k is nearly always used to tune the plate circuit to resonance with the grid, or secondary, circuit. The plate circuit is the third circuit to tune and when this condition obtains, there is a large feed back of energy from the plate circuit to the grid circuit through the electrical capacity effect between the elements of the tube. This energy will then pass through the tube in the regular fashion and be further amplified or strengthened. In the operation, the set it will be noted that, as the plate circuit is tuned to the grid circuit, the signals keep increasing in strength. When the circuits are exactly tuned, or very nearly so, the tube will oscillate and render inaudible any incoming signal. Therefore, it is desirable to increase the feedback effect almost, but not quite to the point where oscillations start.

The telephone receivers should be fairly good ones for best results. If a powerful broadcasting station is nearby it is entirely possible that, with any good type of regenerative receiver, the signals will be strong enough to operate a loud speaker fairly well. In that event the loud speaker should be connected in place of the telephone receivers. The B battery m should be about 10 to 25 volts for a soft or gassy detector tube, while 22½ to 45 volts will be necessary with the newer types of tubes. A small fixed condenser, about .01 microfarad, should be connected as shown at n to provide a path for the radio-frequency currents around the telephone receivers and B battery.

Long Term Highway Bonds

It is strange but true that the man who will finance his business sensibly and carefully, who will buy and sell a house with acumen and wisdom, who will choose his bank with mettle and care and guard his personal financial affairs with the utmost skill, frequently throws caution to the winds when considering the raising and spending of money for roads.

It is so pitifully easy to arrange to have somebody else pay for a road! A bond issue to run fifty years puts the burden of paying on the men and women who come after us, while we use the road!

This is bad enough, as a matter of unsound economics, but it is worse when the money so raised is so unwisely expended as to produce a road which wears out long before the bonds become due. In such cases, and there are many of them!—the body politic finds itself in the position of paying for roads which no longer exist, and faced with the additional necessity of rebuilding the road and maintaining it, as well as paying the interest and finally the principal, on the bonds which built roads which wore out.

There are cases where long term bonds are justified and necessary. But there are no cases where the expenditure of such funds is justified for anything less than a permanent road, so located, so built, so planned, as to length, gradient, width, and location as to make it of service to the people to come as well as those who now use it.

It has been said that there is nothing permanent about any road except its location, but this is only true when maintenance is an afterthought. It is as unwise to build a road and let it ravel to pieces as it is to build a house and let it go unpainted and unshowered. Paint the house, insure it, repair it, and it may stand for a hundred years or more. Maintain the road as it is used, and it should last indefinitely. Only such roads should be built with bond issue money, and only such roads should be built with money derived from town or county or state bonds, as will serve town, county and state for all time to come.

To do otherwise is to betray the trust of the helpless unborn.

AUTOMOBILE DRIVERSThe appalling increase in the number of those who are operating automobile
while under the influence of intoxicating liquors, as reflected by court records and statistics of accidents which have occurred during the past three years, has attracted the attention of law abiding automobilists and the authorities of every State, but everyone seems to be able to advance any remedy to meet this situation.The Automobile Legal Association does not expect that it can eliminate wholly this dangerous class of automobile drivers but the Association has taken the position that unless this class of offenders is at least curtailed in every way possible by the enactment of some technical provision of the various automobile laws, but the man who indulges in the use of intoxicating liquors, knowing that he will soon operate his automobile and probably endanger the lives of children, pedestrians and other users of the highway as well as his own, is at heart a criminal. If every one were to take that view of the subject and assist in the prosecution of such people, it would soon become extremely difficult for one to operate an automobile under such conditions without himself feeling the consciousness that he is at heart a criminal.The A. L. A. does not intend to launch a spasmodic campaign, but has made its plans to consistently and everlastingly pound at this class of offenders until it is hoped some impression will have been made upon their stupid brains that will have some effect. In this campaign the Association has requested the assistance of the press in disseminating publicity and statistics concerning this very dangerous class of automobilists. It has also instructed its attorneys to prosecute on behalf of any automobilist who makes a complaint and furnishes evidence, every operator of an automobile who operates while under the influence of intoxicating liquors.The Association has also requested its entire membership to co-operate in this great movement by furnishing evidence to its attorneys of such violation and has urged them to appear as witnesses in court in order that such a person may be convicted and placed on record as one unworthy and unfit to operate automobiles.A second step the Association proposes to take is through the assistance of the press in publishing statistics and showing the increase in this alarming situation and thus to arouse the general public to assist in the clean-up.In connection with this, the Association also proposes to call the attention of the public generally to the absurd attitude on the part of some of the Judges of the courts in their leniency in dealing with offenders of this class.The Association will file a petition for legislation that will make a conviction of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquors punishable by imprisonment only and for a period of not less than three months.It will ask for legislation that will prohibit the licensing authorities from issuing a license to operate automobiles to a person thus convicted for a period of not less than three years, and coupled with the Association will also request legislation to authorize the authorities to suspend the registration of pleasure cars, if any, which the criminal may own.The word criminal is used in an advisory capacity, for it is believed that if the public generally were to regard an automobilist who operates while under the influence of intoxicating liquors as a dangerous criminal and unhesitatingly refer to him as such, the enormity of his offense might in time impress itself upon him, for a person who operates while intoxicated at once discloses himself as one who operates with utter disregard for the safety of every other person upon the highway.GREENWOOD*Rowe HillMrs. Carrie Swan of Norway is vis-

Hallowe'en Festivities
A very charming Hallowe'en Party was given by Mrs. George Kneeland for her daughter Joyce, between the hours of four and six. The guests were escorted into the living room by little Miss Joyce who was dressed in a gown of orange crepe paper, trimmed with numerous black cats and witches.

The room was tastefully decorated in streamers of orange and black and with black jack-o'-lanterns strung on wires over the table which was very attractive, with its many favors suitable for the occasion.

Among the favors was a pumpkin upon which an owl was perched, bearing the words "Life me off the pumpkin and your fortune I will tell," also an old witch stirring a pot over a fire; these were filled with candy. Before the treat of ice cream, cake and fancy cookies was served, several games were played, including a cracker hunt, untagging the spider's web; on the end of each string was a bag of goodies. Trying to eat the marshmallows which were strung on a string caused much merriment. The little visitors were Master Robert Cummings, the Misses Amy Stevens, Iva Ring, Barbara Cole.

BETHEL

Oxford Pomona Grange
Oxford Pomona Grange was entertained by Bear River Grange Tuesday, Nov. 5 in a cordial, hospitable manner. The meeting was opened by Worthy Master Herman Mason, officers present: Chaplain Bertha A. E. Morse, Assistant and Lady Assistant Stewards, Brother Edwin Bennett and Sister Bennett. Opening song "Either Come" (Grange melody) was sung by all. Sister F. E. Russell was pianist for the day. Minutes of last meeting read (and just at this juncture a demonstration of weight was given when a settler tottered to some extent, just a little laugh).

A communication was read from Washington, D. C., sent by direction of the President in reply to the resolutions drawn at the last meeting which was held with Bear River Grange when Senator B. M. Pernald was the honored guest and speaker of the day, were approved and forwarded urging a World Peace to be brought about. Pomona and State Granges of New England are to be urged to take up an endorse the same by the promulgation of the resolutions for the benefit of all humanity.

Distribution of school funds was brought before the order by a communication from Ralph O. Brewster of Portland. At this juncture Brother and Sister Wight arrived and took their respective seats. Roll call of Granges gave attendance from Hebron, Paris, Norway, Bethel, Franklin, Pleasant Valley, Round Mountain, Alder River, West Paris, Bear River, Upton and Bear Mt. Grange.

The degree of Pomona was conferred on four candidates to wit: Thelma Thilow of Franklin Grange, Mrs. Annie Heath, Bethel Grange, Mrs. Sadie Knight of Alder River Grange and Mrs. Mary Brooks of Upton Grange, were duly instructed and received into membership.

A recess followed and dinner was served, typical of Bear River Grange, bountiful and good.

Open session was held during the program. A cordial welcome was given by Brother Fred Wight, Master of the host Grange and their Worthy Lecturer called for all to sing America.

Brother G. W. Q. Perham responded to the welcome address in a very happy manner, and among his remarks quoted that bears ("Oxford Bears") had appetites as was proved in the dinner hall. Dr. Goodrich, one of the state health officers then gave a talk which was very instructive and many good things to do in case of contagious diseases were made plain and explained. All were glad to meet Dr. Goodrich and glad to listen to his address. Piano solo, Sister Mrs. F. E. Russell, Reading and encore, Sister Annie Brown, violin and piano, Brother and sister Wight, with encore.

A talk was given by Brother L. E. McIntire touching on many points so vital to the common good. The forty-eight hour law, the beneficial work being done by the grange constantly improving conditions. He was listened to with great interest. Song, Sister Rubina Kneeland, reading, Sister A. E. K. Grover; song, Brother and Sister Brink, Brother and Sister Wight; a reading was then given by Sister Sabrina Jackson, one of the best loved members, only eighty years young, a worker in the order for many years and we all hope many, many years more.

The next meeting will be with Paris Grange. Annual election and installation of officers. We must not forget to mention the treat of repast between Dr. Goodrich, Brother Perham, Worthy Master Mason and as a finale, Brother McIntire put in a side winder on Brother Perham. "Well, 'a hearty laugh is worth a thousand groans in any market."
